Phänomenologie des Geistes

Phänomenology is one of the most important works of philosophy. Hegel published it in 1807 as the introductory part of his overall concept, a methodologically coherent “system of science”, which he extended until his death in 1830.

In a way that is still unique today, the “Phenomenology” the necessary progressive reciprocal relationship of the forms of our consciousness with its object contents. Our knowledge develops here before our mental eye from its simplest level to its highest appearance.
